About the program – Tuesday 9.00am

Professor Martin Westwell (Flinders University and keynote speaker) will tell us more about the science of learning and how it might inform our decision-making. Neuroscience research is influencing education practice and home life. Schools now give more attention to providing for different learning styles and abilities and parents are more aware of the importance of sleep for their children.

Winners – Congratulations to two Adelaide larrikins who started their company in 1980 and recently won the 2014 gold medal - the highest national honour from the Australian Institute of Architects. What is their company called?

Did you know? The Bradman Museum which is located in the Adelaide Oval complex was independently valued for insurance at $15 million. The museum is open to the public while we are there. We will have a range of pre-owned cricket books on sale at the conference for cricket tragics to purchase for a pittance.

Do you know the name of Adelaide's newest building (below). It's certainly a stunning addition to the local skyline.
